DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Carter House was located on the south bank of Carter's Creek on Kent Island, approximately eight miles south of Stevensville and three miles north of Kent Point. The house site has become part of a modern sub-division known as Tower Gardens. A small cemetery on the site contains seven gravestones dating from 1855 to 1903. These include six members of the Carter family and one member of the Tanner family.

The house apparently was still standing in the early 1950's but was destroyed sometime thereafter. Thus far, no detailed description or photograph of the house has been discovered. Brief descriptions of the house may be found in two sources, however. In 1951, the Boston architectural firm of Perry, Shaw, and Hepburn was commissioned by the Maryland Historical Society to prepare a brief survey of important early buildings in Eastern Maryland. On page 4 of that report, the following remarks are made:

7.1 DESCRIPTION

...The Carter House on Kent Island is not described in Forman except in passing on p. 201 and is illustrated by a thumb-nail sketch opposite p. 57. The house is to the west of the road down Kent Island, and on the south shore of Carter's Creek. It is untenanted. The house is in reasonably good repair. From a casual survey, it appears that the north end of the house was built first and the south end was added to it around 1800. The interior wood-work appears to be of the period 1810 to 1820...

The report refers to a brief note in Henry Chandlee Forman's first book, Early Manor and Plantation Houses of Maryland (privately printed in Easton, Maryland, 1934). Forman notes that the house was a two room deep building with a gambrel roof and two chimneys on each gable end. The sketch on page 57 illustrates a five bay house with a large gambrel roof and flush gable chimneys.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

A large 1 1/2 story five bay house with paired gable chimneys and a gambrel roof stood on this site until the 1950's. Described briefly by Dr. H.C. Forman in the 1930's and by Perry, Shaw, and Hepburn in 1951, the house had a double pile plan and was probably constructed in two parts. The latter report noted that the original north end was enlarged circa 1800 and that the interior woodwork appeared to date to circa 1810-20. The only early feature surviving on the site is a small cemetery with gravestones of the Carter family dating to the latter half of the 19th century.
